Dolman Crim

After graduating from the Culinary Institute of America, NY, in 1979, Crim served as a sous-chef at Wimann’s, Ithaca, before joining Cornell in 1982. “I first became interested in cooking as a child by reading cookbooks and watching my mother cook,” he explained. In high school, he decided to make cooking his career because nothing else really interested him. He regards Cornell Dining as an amazing career on which to paint the twilight of his professional career.” His signature dishes cover boundless meats, exotic cooking and classical cooking techniques which allow him to take relatively simple foods and make them into memorable eating experiences. Still he would rather have a great meal prepared by someone who loves what they do than “an expensive cheeseburger than “an expensive

Tony Kveragas

After finishing college in Boston, Kveragas accepted a job with Grills, Cigars & Co. Becoming bored with the job, he started working part-time at the Barestone Business School as current head chef for MBA student socials.

To learn more about other aspects of the food industry, he studied in France and moved to Paris, where he worked at an “acquit” (daily diet and group strategy. Once he was learned at a culinary school that offered intensive tuition to students who would be willing to stave away for the 3 Star Michelin Chef instructors of La Varenne Culinary School, he was hired, earning The Grande Diplome from La Varenne in 1993. He joined Cornell in 1990 and is currently a candidate for a Cornell graduate degree.

Kveragas enjoys creating ethnic and antipasto-based cuisines because he believes food is a common denominator that all cultures share with enthusiasm and pride. Kveragas is destined in diverse cuisines until Cornell’s 2004 Diversity Award for creating authentic experience of North Star and on “less frequent” cuisines.

Steve Miller

Miller, trained at the Culinary Institute of America, joined Cornell in 1989 and is currently a sous-chef. He started cooking at the age of 18 at Blanche’s Greenhouse Inn and after working there for 2 years he knew he loved to cook for others and never looked back.

When Miller sat at a restaurant, he checks out look at everything from the building to the place settings, uniforms before the food even comes, “I try to figure out every dish and how could I make this better,” he said. His specialty is preparing ethnic foods.

“Instead of ‘I won’t eat that because I don’t like it’ I make this out every time. The last thing I want to do is go home and cook!” Miller explains. “I never cook unless I’m getting paid. After being in a kitchen for 10-12 hours a day, the last thing I want to do is go home and cook!” Miller explains. “I never cook unless I’m getting paid. After being in a kitchen for 10-12 hours a day, the last thing I want to do is go home and cook!”

For years of planning, pulling, and replanting flowers to keep Cornell looking like a garden, several members of the Grounds department put their hands together to create a help that will change color with the Cornell calendar.

“It’s just the beginning of the end,” commented Dennis Osika, Grounds Crew Foreman. “The administration always wants different colors during commencement and commencement, so we have had to take the plants out. We’re lucky if it happens once, but when we do have to do it, it’s a big deal.”

President Jeffrey Lehman was heard to say that, “It is wonderful when staff members develop new ideas to become more productive.”

The new plants were developed by soaking the bulbs, one side at a time, in the dye bath. They will then be taken to the dye tanks and left to sit for a specified amount of time. After the dyeing process, the plants will be placed in the dye tanks and allowed to dry before being planted in the desired location.

In an effort to make this possible, Wendi explained, “All above ground parking spots in central campus will become designated for mobility impaired.”

One unique feature of the new parking garage is that it will not have any mobility impaired parking spots. In order to make this possible, Wendi explained, “All above ground parking spots in central campus will become designated for mobility impaired.”

Free Parking on Campus—Stealth Parking Garage to be Built

Plans were revealed today that illustrate an underground parking garage, which will be built in central campus. The facility will be located beneath the A D White House and Mall Hall. The entrance will be off of Tower Road across from Uris Hall and the exit will be onto East Avenue in front of Rockefeller Hall.

Designed by the same firm that built the British/French Channel, which runs under the English Channel, it will feature 500 new parking locations. William Wendt, director of Transportation Services, stated that, “This new development will make it possible for us to offer free parking on central campus. Many staff members have been asking for this for a long time.” Funding for this project will come from a special book sale to be held every year for the next 75 years. One unique feature of the new parking garage is that it will not have any mobility impaired parking spots. “In order to make this possible,” Wendt explained, “all above ground parking spots in central campus will become designated for mobility impaired.”
