Leadership Leads

Vision

George Peter

B ones to President Jeffrey Lehman. He has called for input- ing from across the campus (students, faculty, staff, and alumni) through the “Call to Engagement” to help form forums a clear vision for the university. He could have hired high-priced consultants as usual, and we could have come back with thoughts gleaned from the people they interview. Lehman does not go to the core of the matter because he presides over the process itself.

This column has proclaimed for years that people with valuable advice are the crux of the matter. Without the vision and willingness to plan, it doesn’t matter what we do.

Do not hallucinate.

Top Ten Sites for the New Year

Vicky A. Beaur

T hroughout 2003 this column explored subjects ranging from Cornell's unusual measures for preventing plants to the employee holiday schedule, many of which were published through www.cornell.edu.

For the new year, I wanted to offer you a subset of Web sites that I find to be very useful in both my personal and professional life.

May those wishes come true in 2004.

1. www.web2.org - the virtual Internet guru, all things standard for Internet technology.

2. www.web2.org - are for those looking for help in creating Web sites, particularly for Cornell.

3. www.cornell.edu/Departments/ — for finding phone numbers, the latest news, and sustainable resources for your personal favorite feature.

Cornell Employee Sports Saturday

Joe DeMarco

T end of winter’s cold breeze already? Hard enough to believe the weather’s cold.

Your Employee Engagement would like to invite a day of activities for you to get you and your family away from this misery.

On February 7, the fall slate of Cornell athletic events, activities, and a wonderful community run was scheduled for the year. Cornell Employee Sports Saturday was committed to make the whole university aware of the events, and the whole university be aware of the events. If we don’t have the vision to see where we are going, it doesn’t matter how we get there. If we don’t have the vision to see where we are going, it doesn’t matter how we get there.

The planning and development of the season reached the campus. Bravo to the president for using them.

Seldom do they get to the core of the matter because that process reaches the university. He could have hired high-priced experts as consultants and they would have come back with thoughts gleaned from the people they interview. Lehman does not go to the core of the matter because he presides over the process itself.

This column has proclaimed for years that people with valuable advice are the crux of the matter. Without the vision and willingness to plan, it doesn’t matter what we do.

The Cornell United Way campaign has collected $552,274 to date. That's an impressive 90% of the university's campaign goal, but $21,076 more is needed to make it to the top.

Now there are 4 more reasons for you to help the university campaign reach its goal—send in a donation by January 30 and become eligible for one of four special "Reach for the Top" Grand Prizes—a gift certificate for a "Lunch Bunch Month for Two and a Friend in a Fun" at an on-campus Cornell Dining location (those who have already returned a pledge card during the current campaign will also be eligible for this special drawing.)

If you haven't contributed yet, there are 2 ways to pledge:

- Call 255-6071 for a pledge card and ask a credit card or payroll deduction to make your pledge payable to the Cornell United Way on-line at www.cornell.org/pledge

Even a dollar paycheck will help United Way make it to the top!
