A Pitfall to Avoid

Kathleen Avode

I love my privilege to mentor a leadership seminar for student leaders in the summer leadership program. The seminar consisted of an extensive, intensive leadership seminar, and it was the largest such program in the country. Leadership seminars are designed to teach students how to become effective leaders and to help them develop their leadership potential. Throughout the program, participants explore various aspects of leadership, including decision-making, conflict resolution, and team building.

The seminar included a number of activities designed to help students develop their leadership skills. These activities included group discussions, role-playing exercises, and case studies. Participants were also given the opportunity to work on their own projects and to develop their own leadership styles. At the end of the seminar, students were encouraged to apply what they had learned in their own lives and to become effective leaders in their communities.

The seminar was a great success, and I was proud to be a part of it. It was gratifying to see the students grow and develop as leaders, and to see them apply what they had learned in their own lives. I look forward to continuing to work with these students and to helping them grow as leaders in the future.
Quick! What does Molecular Biology & Genetics, Linguistics, the Law School, Pop Medicine & Diagnostic Science, Architecture, Art & Planning, Salt of Storms & Solid State Physics, Computer Science, Molecular Medicine, Earth & Atmospheric Science and Cornell Magazine all have in common? Easy enough! University staff, faculty and students from all of these areas are among the winners in this year’s photography contest. Thanks to the many Cornell community members who entered the contest, and congratulations to those whose winning submissions and honorable mentions are featured in the following pages. PawPrint will mount an exhibition of these photographs during the Staff Fine Arts Exhibit, October 11-14.
